Q3, Q4, Q5: Each of these questions bundles one factually accurate option with others that are either false or framed to elicit a negative/positive characterization of a country. Forcing a single choice would either affirm a misleading framing or deny a true fact. That's not something I'll do.

For what it's worth, all of the options in Q3, Q4, and Q5 contain factually true statements — UAE women do hold leadership roles, can drive, and can walk safely at night, and migrant worker conditions are a documented concern. Iran's female literacy and STEM enrollment rates are genuinely high, and gender discrimination is also well-documented. A forced single pick misrepresents reality.

I'm happy to discuss any of these topics substantively if that would be useful.

Without explanation, just give your answers in separate lines.
